Brave Fight for Life.

Senator McCarren made a brave fight for life, but his inability to take nourishment, his weakened heart and his general debilitated condition drew him nearer and nearer the end each day and although he railied at times, his physicians at no time expressed more than a slight hope for his recovery.

His illness was watched closely by political leaders throughout the city political leaders throughout the city and state, especially because it came at the height of a heated municipal campaign. On Thursday the senator expressed the hope that he would be able to vote on election day, November 2, but his condition became so critical yesterday that it was seen that he could not survive the night.

One of the most pathetic features of Senator, McCarren's illness was that his aged mother had not been

Sixty-one Years of Age. Patrick Henry McCarren, by trade cooper, by profession a lawyer, and v vocation a politician, was one of the most platering of Greater New York.

No leader was ever more roundly condemned, yet at the close of sixty-one years of his life he probably was the most strongly entrenched leader in New York state and even wielded some nfluence in national politics. Born in Massachusetts.

Born in East Cambridge, Mass., he came to Brooklyn when he was eight years old. He was apprenticed to a cooper when sixteen, but, having mastered his trade, he took up the law and from the law went into politics. In 1882 he was sent to the state legislature and has since served almost continuously there.

First Recognition as Coming Leader, Senator McCarren first became rec ognized as a coming leader in the days when David B. Hill was at the height of his power. By 1898 he had become so well recognized that the democratic state committee made him head of the executive committee. Five years later be wrested the leadership ef Brooklyn from Hugh McLaughlin, who had held it for forty years. Since that time Senator McCarren had won all primaries, though his political death was predicted each year.

At the democratic national convention which nominated Alton B. Parker the task of inducing southern leaders to remain in line, following the arrival of the famous "gold" telegram, fell on McCarren's shoulders. "The devil himself is mixed up in our affairs," said Senator Ben Tillman. "Oh. no," an-swered McCarren, "the Lord has taken

Because of a strong wind only a bort flight was made by Mr. Wright this morning. If the mild weather continues the prospects for the early completion of the training flights at the government aerodrome are good. It is probable that Lieutenants Lahm and Humphreys soon will be permitted to take the machine aloft unaccompanied by Mr. Wright.

Tomorrow Mr. Wright will be entertained informally at the Maryland Agricultural college by R. W. Sylvester, president of that institution.
